Flats with Devos. Fewer galleons, wears confidence. The underwear threat of the play was the distribution of an amount of property left a Mr. Dan Gillespie by an aunt, providing he should marry within two years. Dan badly needed the money and pretended to uncle Dan Smith that he was married, and had a son a year old.

The uncle, determined to know, decided to visit him. Then came the hunt for a wife on Dan's part, one who would extend to be while the deacon was there. Dan asked every one he met to get him a wife, and on the arrival of the deacon all kinds of pretended wives appeared but Dan apparently satisfied the deacon with impromptu excuses and explanations.

Then came the quest for the son, and all kinds of children, boys, girls and dummies appeared; after a time as things progressed it became necessary for Dan to tell the truth and own up he was a bachelor, whereupon his father-in-law refused to let her marry, but upon learning the deacon was her father and Dan the lover all could go well and the estate be settled for the day had been appointed for the event to take place, thus unraveled the tangle of affairs.

The part of Dan was taken by W. J. Flanders, a bright and scheming young man but under the pressure of excitement was inclined to confuse statements badly, contradicting his own sayings, causing a deeper tangle.

Jenkins Johnson, Gypson T. Clifford, the gardener, was a willing young fellow, ready to aid Dan, but just boiled over when he thought Sally, his own new wife, might want to continue to be the wife of Dan instead of his.

Deacon Smith, Edward L. Burnell, a lean, lack, warily fellow, was not so very easily fooled after all. He also had an eye for the money which could be used for his daughter to advantage, and knew the way to get it.

Sally, Alida Bailey, a servant of Dan, was willing to rule a while for the sake of $1000. She was good at disguising but after a time was inclined to be jealous of her own working and let the whole affair out.

Miss, Camson, Mrs. Maude Mann, was the genuine old maid, delighted at the thought of being a wife, if only a pretended one. Her tittering and babble accompanied by the small white handkerchief, curls and calico gown, caused no small amount of laughter.

Poor Louisiana, Ora Cook, the darlings of the town, was going to have justice administered, and she'd but upon the presentation of the stolen child, went off content.

After the first act, Frank Starbird gave a humorous reading, on the profits of cheese in comparison with silver that called a good applause from the audience.

At the close of the drama, ice cream and cake were served. The floor was cleared for dancing and the stage for card playing.

The grand march was led by Homer D. Tubbs and Mildred McLean, followed by the sides, W. A. Lewis, W. H. D. Smith, Frank Lovejoy, Charles Brooks, Harry Spiller, F. E. Drake, Orlin Pigeon and ladies. There were about 80 couples on the grand march. After the grand march an order of a dozen dances was carried out with excellent music by Stearns' orchestra. The committee on arrangements were R. O. Porter, chairman, W. A. Lewis and H. A. Abbott.

The Barton Reading club was entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alice Oxnard on Oak avenue. The subject of the afternoon was "Fiction" and the readers were Mrs. Alice Marston and Mrs. B. F. Bradbury.

Observance of Ladies' Night.

Pennesseewassee Lodge, No. 18, Knights of Pythias, observed Ladies' night, Tuesday evening, at the Norway Opera House. A large number of invitations were extended and nearly all were present.

The evening's entertainment was opened with a concert by Stearns' orchestra. The three act drama, "Family Affair," was presented by local talent and was followed by dancing.

The farce, which was a decidedly ludicrous one, was finely presented and the actors won the hearty applause of the audience. The underlying threat of the play was the distribution of an amount of property left a Mr. Dan Gillespie by an aunt, providing he should marry within two years. Dan badly needed the money and pretended to uncle Dan Smith that he was married, and had a son a year old.

"Are You a Mason?"

The Colonial Players of Bath presented Leo Dietrichstein's comedy, the three-act farce "Are You a Mason?" at the Norway Opera House, Friday evening, March 23rd, before a small but appreciative audience.

The company was staged under the direction of H. A. Huse, a former actor and stage manager of several professional successes, who himself took the part of George Fisher, a stock broker and former actor. Mr. Fisher, proud to be the "friend in need" by helping his friend, Frank Perry, out of several scrapes caused by his claiming to be a mason, in one of which he personated as a lady daughter of Mr. Perry's father-in-law and a French girl, former sweetheart of his father-in-law.

H. T. Stevens took the part of Frank Perry, a gay young New Yorker, who during his wife's absence from home leads a wild life, and wishing to satisfy his wife and to placate his mother-in-law, Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood, in order to obtain money, tells his wife on her return home that he has become a mason, knowing that Mrs. Bloodgood has wanted him to become a member for a long time.

The part of Eva Perry, the wife of Frank Perry, was taken by Martha Crosby. Mrs. Perry loved and trusted her husband through all and was greatly pleased to learn that he had become a mason during her absence.

Mrs. Brenda Hill took the part of Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood, who would be a mason if she were a man. Mrs. Bloodgood was the mother of Mrs. Perry and Annie and Lulu Bloodgood, and being jealous of a former sweetheart of her husband named Angelina, who was supposed to have killed herself on the day of her marriage to Mr. Bloodgood, keeps her husband under complete subjection by referring to his past.

The part of Mrs. Bloodgood was filled presented, being taken in a very realistic manner.

Anno Bloodgood, W. A. Murtaugh, the husband of Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood and father-in-law of Mr. Perry, had deceived his wife for thirty years by claiming to be a mason that he might have the privilege of taking a night out occasionally to play pool. His trying to deceive Mr. Perry in regard to his being a mason, and who she had been jealous of, had killed herself on the day of her marriage to Mr. Bloodgood, keeps her husband under complete subjection by referring to his past.

To Ailing Women

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Norway.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Norway woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Joseph A. Woods, Summer St., Norway, Me., says: "I am glad to say a word in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was annoyed for a long time by backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble. I tried many remedies but got no relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The contents of two boxes brought me great relief. I might add that Doan's Kidney Pills also cured my little son of weak kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cts. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Early Morning at the Homestead

Daylight was flooding in from the east, Driving away the great black beast that had been prowling around all night, Helping the town cats to keep up their fight.

"Now for the farmer's corn I'll go," And robin redbreast up in the tree, "Cut out a day," said the old brown hen, "I'll lay an egg for the hired man."

"You say, you say," said the little pup, "I'll bark away till those boys get up." The old man called from the foot of the stairs, "Get up you lazy lousies!"

"Are you going to lay in bed all day?" Came Joe, come Sam, now hustle there Ned, "The cat's in the house and the pigs not fed."

"Get a move on there now and be quick I say, There's a lot of work to be done today."

But the last he heard as he slammed the door was, "Yes, sir," and a grunt and a heavy snore.

"So dear," says he, "I do declare, Those boys would make a minister swear," "No no so hard," the good wife said, "The cat's in the house and the pigs not fed."

"They worked in the field till the set of sun, And 'twas half past eight when the chimes were done."

"Good thunder, Nancy, there's 'tis again! It's a good thing the cat's in the house, 'Tis always the same old story with you, Ever ready to say some thing to me."

"And I'm so hard on the boys, so full of abuse, O the boys are so sleepy! They were up at 5 o'clock!"

Or they're tired or hungry or such like silly tales, "But they'd go a-fishing or out on a lark, And hike it, and travel from daylight till dark, But when they're needed they never appear, And are only conspicuous because they're not here."

"But they'd keep me waiting while the hired man, With a full day's wages, for eight hours work, Of 'em I always said, I guess 'em say my mate."

But, come, do hurry up Nancy, the breakfast is late; For I swear! I'll have that last load of hay From the sick-o-meadow by 10 o'clock!"

The morning meal now ready at last, The family were seated to break the long fast, And the boys were needed in slumber deep Slept on as only farm boys sleep;

And the steaming viands cooked with care, Were many and ample, enough and to spare, And to the fluffy biscuits all snow white flecked.

The hired men paid their due respect, The farmer engrossed in his plans for the day, Ate his breakfast in silence, had nothing to say, Whilst loud through the open door, and near Rang the claxon notes of chancery.

Of Oxford County Origin.

Another Oxford County man has done something worth while—Milton Dana Morrill of Washington, D. C., the inventor of the Morrill moulds for the building of poured concrete houses.

Concrete works, was a pupil in Fryeburg Academy for several years. Although living across the line in Conway, Fryeburg can lay partial claim to him, for his mother, grand parents, uncles and aunts were all natives of Fryeburg.

He was the son of the late Joel Eastman Morrill and Caroline (Warren) Morrill, who also were educated in the academy, and who with their children always attended the old Congregational church in Fryeburg.

Mr. Morrill from Fryeburg Academy went to Andover and to Pratt's Institute, where he studied architecture. He has also studied abroad several years. He first built "typed houses" at Virginia Highlands near Washington, D. C., last August the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. adopted it as the best means for housing their mine workers.

The great anthracite mines near Scranton, Pennsylvania are already equipped on the forty or more houses, which will comprise the village. Plans for the entire group of buildings have been prepared by Mr. Morrill. Adjoining this group of buildings on a high plateau will be located a group of bungalows for the superintendent and foremen of the mines.

Mr. Morrill captured the prize which was offered by the International Congress on Tuberculosis, for the best model of a house adapted for the occupancy of persons afflicted with that disease. Mr. Morrill has an office in Washington, D. C., and has recently opened one in Chicago.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and the only constitutional treatment, Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by Dr. J. C. Chamberlain, Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only constitutional cure on the 10 drops to a teaspoonful, it acts directly on the blood and the mucous surfaces of the system. They often cure by the use of the system, case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Shall We Have a County Home?

A few days since, while talking with an intelligent farmer, the matter of county homes for the care of the poor, to supersede the town farm, was discussed, and from that discussion we are led to believe that the unfortunate who become town charges, could be better cared for without additional expense, than at present.

The different towns in a county, joining together, could without increasing the burden of taxation, purchase an ideal location, with fertile land, where the institution under intelligent management, would become largely self supporting.

Instead of maintaining a score of homes, each in charge of a superintendent, there would be one home, conducted with a view to desirable care of the commonwealth's proteges.

A physician, living near, could be employed to attend all. Social or religious gatherings would be afforded recreation, and we believe that much more satisfactory conditions could be obtained; the comfort and needs of the commonwealth's unfortunate proteges, would be served in a manner befitting our advanced civilization.

This has been the system in New Hampshire for nearly a half century, and it is liked better than the town farm.

When Life Was Young.

At the Old Farm.

Norway's most noted author of Young People's stories, Dr. C. A. Stephens, has just published a new book under the above title. It is published by The Old Squire's Book Store, Norway, Lake, Maine.

The story is located on an old farm in the upper part of the town of Norway and is a Norway story from beginning to finish. The footbridge is a view of our Lake Umbagog from the foot of the hills in the far background.

In this story the author is supposed to introduce many of his boyhood experiences. The grandfather and grandmother are represented as living in the farm. The grandfather was not only a farmer, but was a man of affairs, and the grandmother was a thoroughly womanly woman, who managed her own household after her own way. Five brothers, sons of the old squire, went to the terrible Civil War, and all five did not survive the conflict.

The grandchildren, who were waifs and orphans, came back to live at their grandfather's farm in the years of 1885-90. They came from four different States in the United States, and had never seen each other before they arrived at the farm. There were six cousins, all in one family at the farm, aged from nine to fifteen years. These cousins were: Addison, Theodore, Halstead, Ellen, Wealthy and the little boy, who afterwards writes the story.

Addison was a good boy, a boy of character, studious and scholarly; Theodore, a noble hearted child, womanly and sweet in all her ways, and a good scholar as Addison; Halstead was a strange boy, of a very unsteady disposition; Ellen and Wealthy were good, dutiful children; the little boy who came from the city found everything on the farm new, strange and interesting.

In the book is a map of the old squire's farm and farm buildings, a two-story farmhouse with an old wagon house, an east barn and a west barn. It is off from the main road and was reached by a lane to the house. This lane was separated from the road to the Corners and the village by a swinging gate. Of the places around about there that would be of interest to a boy are named the garden, the bee shed, the orchard, the Baldwin orchard, the path across the fields to the corner, the west field, the east field, the north field, the south field, Goose pond, the path to the maple grove, to the Edwards farm, to the Aunt Hannah lot, the great wood's path to the old squire, and many other interesting places.

Perhaps one of the most exciting experiences was when the little city boy tried to lead the wild calf "Dagon." The calf with head and tail in the air, ran as only a calf can the first time they get out of doors. The calf took the little boy out on the road, and the calf took him miles from home before he could stop him. This was in the first days of the Jersey cow, and at that time they had something of the character of a deer. Another time the boys led home their first Jersey cow, a little, wild, scared creature, particularly afraid of women.
On the way home they met some girls, and though they covered the cow's eyes she got away from them and ran wild in the woods.

"Gram" gave verminfog for all their ailments, and the sight of the verminfog bottle was worse than any ailment.
They hated the verminfog and soon they conceived the idea of exchanging the verminfog bottle for one of elderberry wine. They had a pleasant time taking to take a good, strong dose. He took it, but alas, it was instead a dose of vermifugo. The shame came near making "Gram" ill, and there was nothing to do for the Elder but to give him two table-spoonsful of castor oil for the overdose.
"Gram" gave the children a lecture on "meanness and concealment of facts," but the verminfog bottle was never so prominent afterwards.

The book tells of the daily work of the farm, the washing and shearing of the sheep, the mowing of the lambs, the rides to and from the mill for grist.
At one time they went to the grist mill and a boy about their own age, who had been left in charge at the mill, thought he could grind the corn. He ground it all right, but as the shingle mill loaded down the pond and got stuck under the gates. They could not get it out to close the gates, and all they could do to keep the grinding from spoiling the stones was to grind something until the mill went wrong. Unless there was something grinding in the mill the speed would increase faster and faster, till finally it would go like lightning.

The story tells about the mug bread, Johnny Reb toast and ponies, and there are illustrations of wood-chunks in the clover and the old squire's board. The old squire had hidden some of his best apples in the woodpile, and the picture represents the old squire after removing a stick of wood, taking the apples out and admiring them by one. A boy from the top of the woodpile is looking down at him. Probably the boys visit that board afterwards, for the early apples were evidently of great interest to the young people. One illustration shows them in the orchard gathering fruit. Then there is a picture of the boys returning from the lake with a string of fish and fishing rod. Was there ever a boy not interested in catching fish?

"Tom's fort" as it looks today is a pile of rocks about a large tree. Tom had built up a wall between the large stones that did not quite touch together so that the walls of the shanty were six or seven feet high, except in one place which he cleared for a door. He made a stone fireplace against one of the rocks inside. A little chimney of flat stones ran up the side of the rocks so that he could build a fire there without being plagued by the smoke. Of course the other boys and girls in time found out about this fort, and one evening in the twilight hour they went to take it.
Ellen seemed to be the captain for she says: "Let's steal up stealthily until we are at the foot of the mound; and you boys rush up the path and surprise Tom."
"Your fort is ours!" as you rush in,
"But instead of surprising the fort, they had been bagged into a trap. Kate and Tom had guessed their tactics and were watching, but they were finally anteced to the fort, and many a joyful time they had there.

The boys often went fishing in a brook on the farm, and while fishing in the brook one day a red squirrel was seen carrying a nut in its mouth. The fisherman got the apple that the animal dropped and found it free eating, and by searching found the tree on which it grew. They named the apple "The Wild Rose Sweeting." The apples melted on the palate like a spoonful of ice cream. At the Cattle Show Fair they peddled these apples for a cent a piece, and nearly every one who bought an apple came back for more, and the price was raised to three and four cents.

Finally a gentleman who had bought the last ten in the basket. "Oxford County, Maine, abounds in wild apple trees. By looking about a little the farmer there can readily pick up enough young trees, growing wild, to set an orchard."

At a time the old squire allowed the four people four days for camping out. They hitched up old Sol and Nancy in the farm wagon, loaded the outfit and with a party of their girl and boy friends set out for camp. They entered the orders of the great woods above the Murch farm and in a heavily timbered valley they came to an old log structure known as "the skeddaddlers' fort." Through a faint trace of a path through the woods they came to the banks of Turvy's stream, and finally they came to the old slave's farm, where they camped.
There were two deserted cabins. At Clear Pond they had been obliged to leave their team, as the wagon could not go any further. They had many experiences during that camping trip that Dr.
Stephens tells in his own interesting way. Halse was not allowed to go with them, but during the night he had followed them and frightened them almost to death. They discharged a gun and for a time they thought they had seriously injured him.

esseewassee from the old squire's north

THE ONLY SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT

FOR

Liquor and Drug Using

Nearly forty years ago Dr. Leslie E. Keeley began curing drunkenness and drug addictions. The system which he discovered, known the world around as the "KEELEY CURE," has been in successful operation ever since and has proved its merit in over 400,000 cases. The treatment is rational, scientific, and successful. As far as curing inebriety is concerned it has no rivals or competitors.
The "KEELEY CURE" removes the craving for liquor and drugs and leaves the man master of himself. It is the only treatment that will do this and the only one that cures alcoholic and drug inebriety.

The "KEELEY CURE"
does not nauseate a patient and no attempt is made to cure inebriety by creating a disgust for liquor. A treatment depending upon nauseants or emetics for a cure can never be anything but a failure, because the patient will soon learn that it is not the liquor which nauseates him but that he has been made the victim of a trick; the diseased condition not being relieved back to liquor.

The diseased conditions produced by from five to thirty years constant or periodical use of liquor cannot be cured by a few days of nausea and emesis. Such methods are irrational, brutal and sometimes, permanently injurious.

The taking of the "KEELEY" treatment involves no pain, sickness, or discomfort. Improvement begins at once and continues throughout the entire course of treatment. All patients leave us satisfied and enthusiastic, they are our best advertisements.

If you have need to take treatment for the liquor or drug addiction, investigate the "KEELEY CURE"; look for something that is substantial and has stood the test of time. Where health and happiness are concerned you cannot afford to experiment or take chances, and for that reason you cannot afford to take any treatment but the "KEELEY."

All correspondence is strictly confidential and all inquiries answered in plain sealed envelopes.

OXFORD.

One of the World Wonders.
The Key West extension of the Florida East Coast Railway was opened Jan. 22, 1912. Oxford is proud that one of her sons, Joseph R. Parrott, took such a prominent and important part in its construction. We quote from the announcement of the opening: "It is a word, no graver situation ever presented itself than in this suggested railway which would defy the Atlantic and the Gulf, the rush of the current and the sweep of the storm. Henry M. Flagler, at that date (1902) and until April 9, 1903, was president of the Florida East Coast Railway, since which time he has been chairman of the board, and he with his president, then vice-president and general manager, Joseph R. Parrott, considered carefully all the difficulties involved, weighed all the vexed questions, faced all the dangers, and gave due study to all the adverse opinions as to the possibility of the project."
"On the 13th of November, 1903, the republics of the United States and Panama signed that convention which determined the completion of the Panama Canal. The winter following, Mr. Flagler and Mr. Parrott studied preliminary surveys and engineers' reports in a new light."
"At the end of the winter, Mr. Flagler closed a conference with Mr. Parrott with the question: 'Are you sure this railway can be built?'"
"Mr. Parrott answered, 'I am sure!'"
"Very well," said the capitalist, with the courage of Columbus, "Go ahead!"
The overseas leader completed is one of the world wonders. By its construction, Key West is the southernmost port in the United States. Strategically it is the key to the protection of all the ports on the shore line of the Gulf of Mexico. Commercially, since the Government has made the Panama Canal a free port, Key West has assumed a great importance. It is three hundred miles nearer the eastern terminus of the canal than any other of our Gulf ports.
Financiers considered the project unworkable; railway managers, impracticable; engineers, impossible. It remained for an Oxford man, from old Oxford County way up among the Oxford hills, to say it could be done and to see it through.

Thinks His Boils Beat the Record

"I believe I had the most painful boils that ever afflicted a human being. They were big, came one after another, and held on a long time. I had read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla for the blood that I was ready to try it. Inside of a month it seemed to me I had jumped from torture to bliss. I realized to the utmost the good of the best medicine, and I think the only medicine that would cure me. I recommend Hood's for the blood." Geo. N. Milligan, 181 Winthrop St., Roxbury, Boston, Mass.
